HIGH SCHOOL

FOREWORD

In 1635, our forefathers founded the Boston Latin Grammar School with its first enrollment of only twelve students. Today, three hundred years later, there are twenty-six thousand high schools providing education for more than six million students.

In commemoration of the founding of the Boston Latin School, the year 1935 is being observed as the Tercentenary of Secondary Education. The purpose of the Tercentenary is to celebrate the magnificent accomplishments of secondary education during the last three centuries, and to help the public visualize more readily the significant role of the high school in American democracy.

The nation-wide observance of the Tercentenary has focused the attention of each community upon its high schools. With this in mind we have recorded our history and achievements, and hope on the following pages to acquaint our community better with Washington High School and with the influence it extends over its students.

But to go to school in a summer morn,
Oh, it drives all joy away!
Under a cruel eye outworn,
The little ones spend the day—
In sighing and dismay.

BOARD OF EDUCATION

MR. J. W. DUNSING
MR. H. W. YANT

MR. R. F. ROBINSON
Principal

MR. ROY W. FEIK
Superintendent of Schools

Did you know that the seed from which Washington High School grew, first sprouted in the 1890's? It was then a township school and served the towns of Hammond, Whiting, and East Chicago. W. C. Belton was its first superintendent. In 1896 East Chicago organized its own school at the Todd Opera House, but it was still a township school. In 1897 the East Chicago High School was established. Mr. A. G. Slocomb, the present purchasing Agent of the East Chicago Public Schools, was the first principal of the high school. He served from 1898 to 1903. Other principals of our school have been respectively, Mr. Kline 1904, Mr. J. E. Newell 1905-1907, Mr. H. H. Clark 1908-1922, Mr. T. E. Williams 1922-1925, Mr. R. W. Feik 1925-1934, and the present incumbent, Mr. R. F. Robinson. The name, Washington High School, was taken when Roosevelt became a high school in 1928.

From this humble beginning has grown, in a comparatively short time, a large public school system whose enrollment alone would make a small city. Its employees include a number of principals, teachers, technical and clerical workers, and janitors; and it comprises plants and equipment valued at over three million five hundred thousand dollars.

The East Chicago system of public schools is guided by competent and well informed men. The schools are administered by a superintendent and a board of education. The board is composed of three members appointed by the city council to serve for a period of three years. The board represents the taxpayers and parents in all matters regarding the education of their wards. It handles matters pertaining to finance and housing, and co-operates with the superintendent in defining educational policies and setting up educational standards.

The superintendent is the chief administrator. He defines the educational policies and with the assistance of the assistant superintendent, supervisors, and principals, sees that these policies are carried out, and that the system functions efficiently. The staff of supervisors include those of the industrial arts, art, music, English, science and mathematics, kindergarten, physical education, visual education, social studies and commerce. The physical and mental health of the children is the responsibility of the school doctor and staff of nurses, and of a psychiatrist. School attendance is maintained by an attendance officer and a visiting teacher, the latter of whom works in co-operation with the psychiatrist to aid the maladjusted. A corrective program for pupils who are handicapped by sight, hearing, or speech defects is carried on. The purchasing department does all the buying for the school system, and the department of buildings and grounds sees that all plants are in good condition.

Washington High School is administered by the principal, two assistant principals, and the girls' adviser. Standing faculty committees such as the Social Committee, Weekly Anvil, Senior Anvil, and others assist the administration in formulating policies for the well-being of the school. Administrative policies are carried out in the home rooms. Each pupil is assigned to a home room and is under the guidance of his home room adviser who helps him choose his course, make out his schedule of subjects, and adjust difficulties. The clerical work that is necessary for the co-ordination of all the intricate parts of the school system is handled by an office force consisting of a secretary, a head clerk, and pupil assistants.

Four courses are offered in Washington High School, the college preparatory, general, commercial, and boys' vocational. The course which the student elects determines his program of studies for the four years of his course. The curricular offerings are divided into departments under the guidance of a head. A broad program of studies enables each pupil to select, besides the fundamental subjects, subjects that will aid him in earning a living after he leaves school and that will enable him to use his leisure time beneficially.

Academic offerings include English language and literature; the social studies; foreign language including Latin, French and Spanish; science, and mathematics. Vocational offerings cover shop subjects such as printing, electric shop, auto shop, drafting, machine shop, and wood shop. The home economics department offers courses in cooking, sewing, home decoration and homemaking. Business subjects include in addition to stenography, typewriting and bookkeeping, courses in business training, commercial law, and comptometry. A comprehensive music program is carried out, offerings consisting of a glee club, band, and orchestra. Sketching, layout and design, lettering and handicraft are taught in the art department. The physical education department carries out a corrective and health-building program, and also presents an opportunity to every pupil to participate in sports, either varsity or intramural.

Pupils contribute to the administration of the school. Service organizations composed of pupils of good citizenship and scholastic standing, formulate and carry out policies concerning student affairs. The Student Government governs the student body in matters pertaining to student welfare. The Girl Counselors guide and advise the younger girls in dress, deportment, and conduct. The Washington Brothers give the same service to younger boys. The Boy Patrol co-operates with the student government and with the local police in matters of safety and law and order. Monitors check passes in the halls, guide strangers and visitors around the building, and act as messengers for the office and instructors. The Junior Red Cross is in charge of the benevolent and charitable work of the student body. Pupil assistants help in the library, the offices, cafeteria, bookstore, and clinic. A Student Club Committee directs the recreational activities of the school.

Plans have been laid for the future expansion of the plant at Washington High School, and will be undertaken as soon as financial conditions permit it. The next unit to be added is an industrial building which will house the music, art, and shop departments that are hampered because of inadequate space.

CLASS HISTORY

The freshmen that entered the portals of our school four years ago, are today the seniors; but what a decided contrast! Being verdant and timid freshmen, we were counseled until we became accustomed to our new environment. This we soon did and were rewarded by holding our first social affair, the freshmen party As sophomores we gained prestige and dignity as well as a strong foothold in our school activities. At the sophomore party we enjoyed ourselves immensely.

The junior year found us near the top in almost all school activities. We elected our first class officers and took a deep interest in dramatics, the result being the thrilling play entitled "Seventeen". The holding of the Harvest Party, Junior Prom, and Junior-Senior Faculty Reception added greatly to our social affairs. During the latter part of the semester we eagerly anticipated fulfilling our ambitions of becoming real seniors!

In our senior year we were brilliant in mental fields, won a prominent place in athletics, chose capable and efficient class officers, produced a successful senior play, and were well represented in music and oratory. Our senior Anvil was an achievement we were proud of as was, too, the Senior Carnival. The senior party was a huge success, but the greatest days of our career arrived with commencement activities: Class Day, Picnic, Prom, Baccalaureate, Junior - Faculty Reception and Commencement.

CLASS POEM

The winding trail before us lay,
It seemed to stretch afar;
And as its end, there fell the ray
Of Heaven's brightest star.

With eager hearts, we set out all
Determined for the goal;
We little knew how oft we'd fall,
For Ambition fired each soul.

We took each one, a booklet small,
It carried every dream,
It also held the hopes, and all
That was worthwhile, it seemed.

And oft when trials came along,
We'd totter and we'd sway,
But to the treasured books we clung
And stumbled on our way.

The way was long and hard, it's true,
It led to happiness;
We reached the end of High School Days,
We found the star "Success".

And now safe in its starry gleams,
We'll oft recall those days,
They'll live fore'er in fondest dreams
In memory's store, always.

H. Janovsky.

WASHINGTON

ORGANIZATIONS

Our numerous organizations are the center of the school's recreational life. Activities include athletics, music, debate, oratory, journalism, and various clubs. Music organizations are composed of bands, orchestras, glee clubs and choruses. Debating and oratory are becoming more prominent. The Washington High School teams have participated in several contests and have brought back many merited awards. Practical journalism is offered by the publication of both the Weekly and Senior Anvils. The Washington High School club system provides that each person belong to a club.

An opportunity to serve at school functions is provided for. The Student Government, modeled after the mayor-council type, is the governing body of the school, and consists of a mayor, judge, clerk, and councilmen. This organization acts as an intermediary in all school affairs. The Washington Brothers and Girl Counselors perform important work by assisting the younger students in developing good character and citizenship. Red Cross, Monitors, Student Club Committee, Library Staff, and Patrol Boys are agencies through which students serve Washington High School.

Dear Mary:
Well I'm graduating this May and dear you always don't know it. I'm wondering whether you'll ever reach the 12 grade. I think if you will follow my footsteps this world would be much better off when you look in this anvil just look at my picture if you want a good laugh (I'll look at yours if I want to see a circus) heh heh.
I guess that's all I have to say so I wish you loads of luck in the future. You've been a pretty nice little girl as long as I've known you and I hope that our friendship will be the same as the years go by.

ATHLETICS

No school can be complete, however wide its scope of curricular offerings, without a program of athletic activities. Athletic training and competition develop in the students the fine qualities of co-operation, sportsmanship, mental and physical poise, and loyalty; all of these are essential factors in character building and in preparing the students to become useful and successful citizens.

The Washington High School has varsity teams to represent it in football, basketball, wrestling, baseball, track, swimming, and tennis. Our teams are highly respected and feared by our rivals in both conference and state contests. Although we have no championship squad this season, the splendid spirit and playing of our teams have won a large following.

Three years ago, it was decided to have more students enjoy the benefits of athletic competition and intramural sports: touch football, basketball, swimming, baseball, shuffle board, track, and hockey were organized. Almost all the boys as well as many girls participate in these games. The directing, managing, and umpiring are entirely in the hands of the students themselves. Needless to say there is much interest shown in this form of recreation.

A Tour of The Washington High School

Something of high school life, of its true spirit of freedom, of service, and of sportsmanship, something of its atmosphere of activity, preserved to us as memories of school life vividly portrayed, are hereby presented on the following pages of the Senior Anvil in the form of a Tour of the Washington High School.

Entering the building through the north entrance, we spy the huge clock given by the class of 1929. Every day this same clock has ticked along, either merrily, sadly, or fearfully keeping time with the students' thoughts. We spy a door—we open it and peer in. Immediately we scurry out, for that door leads to the lower regions of the building. Suppose we leave that for later investigation. Deciding on a more familiar route, we wander along the long corridors, casually glancing into the various classrooms. Are we lucky that we're only looking in!

What's that? Music? Certainly, those are our famous glee clubs. Daily they practice and consequently they bring home many merited awards. The Glee Club girls, dressed in their becoming red and white uniforms, entertain us with their delightful music. What beautiful tones they produce! What wide range of tone quality! It would not be surprising for us to hear that these girls prove successful in the musical world. The Glee Club boys, not to be daunted by their fair rivals, parade proudly before us in their dignified attire. They surely can sing! You know they sang over the N. B. C. network and were very successful. Both the boys and the girls have participated in the In-and-About Chicago Chorus for the past three years. We certainly are duly proud of our glee clubs.

Ascending the east stairway, we hear the tap-tap of a lonely typewriter. Investigating, we find that the sound emerges from the Weekly Anvil Office, instead of the typewriting room as we first thought. A newspaper atmosphere here is like that of a large city newspaper. The reporters await their orders, while the editor for the hundreth time exclaims, "Now please get that story and get it in on time!" There is no need to worry, for the Weekly Anvil, a four-page enterprise, unfailingly makes its appearance every Wednesday morning to be read and enjoyed by the student body.

Passing down the hall, we hear a voice raised loudly declaiming and exhibiting all the range and the technique of a great actor. Excitedly we rush into Room 204 expecting tragedy, but instead we find that it is only the drama class rehearsing for its next performance. We feel quite sure the play will be convincing, for it certainly had misled us for a while. The drama classes prepare many programs for assemblies and class plays.

Leaving the actors to their dramatics, we decide to pursue a more leisurely and less exciting course of travel, but this is not to be, for as soon as we turn down the corridor to the right, we notice an atmosphere of tension. This is the Senior Anvil Office. The Senior Anvil is one of the important extra-curricular activities of the school. Dances, plays, campaigns, candy sales, and the frequent interrogation of all the seniors, "Want to buy a Senior Anvil?" —all have contributed to the publishing of this book. Before leaving, we notice the harassed expresions upon the faces of the editor and his assistants as they are busily engaged in work. Each takes a few minutes off now and then to raid the candy-containing "Treasure Chest".

Across the hall are the general offices. Here the stenographic and administrative work pertaining to the school is performed. As assistants to the clerks, girls receive office practice which provides them with business experience. The well-known phrase, "Why were you tardy?" is often heard but seldom anspered satisfactorily. The Lost and Found Committee of the Student Government also has its quarters in this office. Impatiently, the committee cries, "Why can't students hang on to their belongings?" We pass through the inner door into the assistant principal's office. The assistant principal acts as dean of boys and chairman of the social committee. Here plans for all social occasions are made. The adjoining room is the office of the principal. Here we explain our mission, and receive interesting information about the school and its activities.

As we step into the hall, pleasing aromas from the cafeteria arouse our appetites. Descending the center stairway we see the massive clock, which assures us that it is lunch time. Just as we pass the hall lunch counter where foods are attractively displayed, the bell announcing the noon hour rings! Hungry, rushing, pushing students hurry to their lunches. The counter does a rushing business while we wait in line at the cafeteria where hot foods are prepared and sold. Refreshed after this pleasant delay, we visit the rest of the home economics department.

What hum is that we hear? Investigating, we find the sewing classes busily at work. Here the girls learn to make their own clothes and many useful things for the home. We find that the girls are wearing dresses which had been made in the class. Crestfallen faces result when the instructor says, "That will have to be ripped out and done over." Where are those delicious odors coming from? The boys of the cooking club are having their lesson in cooking and are making fudge. See how busy they are stirring and testing! Finally, they all agree that their candy is done and then begins the tiresome process of beating it. How chagrined John is when he finds that the creamy fudge he has visioned turns out to be a sticky mass that must be eaten with a spoon! Now for the dishpans! How happy their sisters would be if the boys were just as efficient and willing at home as they are in the cooking room.

Leaving this amusing sight, we visit the ever-popular bulletin board where students congregate despite traffic rules. Here brief confidences, notes, and books are exchanged during the five-minute interval between classes. The lighted trophy cases next attracts our attention! Upon investigation, we notice laurels that have been won by victorious Washingtonians. We see many statues, cups, and pennants and the famous "Derby", which Washington senators have fought bravely to retain for many years.

Our next place of interest is the library. Before entering it, we stop in the recently added workroom. This room is long and lined with shelves for storage purposes. Several library assistants are busily repairing books, and preparing new books for circulation. We leave the workroom and the workers to enter the busy library. The library in itself is an important school department. Books, magazines, pamphlets, files, and more books! All of these make up the library. Ambitious students, shiftless students: in fact, all types of students go to the library to do their research work.

Leaving the library through the back entrance we pass through the hall to the art department. Posters, portraits, lay-outs, vases, etc., scattered everywhere, hold our eyes momentarily. The commercial art classes meet here daily to receive instructions in artistic drawing. The Senior Anvil art is all drawn by students who have received training in these classes. The handicraft classes are busily engaged making attractive purses, book ends, and waste paper baskets. Many of these articles are done so effectively that it would be quite difficult to make duplicates of them.

The dean's office is one of the roomiest rooms in the building. It is attractively decorated: sofas, easy chairs, and flowers all go to provide comfort and beauty. This office has helped many girls solve difficult problems. The Student Club Committee is holding one of its regular meetings in this office. Let's step in. My, they are busy! Who wouldn't be, with over fifty clubs in the school to supervise. We hear a member report that he has heard that one of the clubs is not very interesting. What to do? The problem is discussed and the committee decides that the club is to be given a new charter and more suggestions and ideas for entertainment. The annual Senior Carnival is planned and produced by the various clubs. The club system of Washington High School has been praised by prominent educators for its effective work. The dean's office is also the headquarters for the Girl Counselors. The girls do very important work in guiding the character and citizenship of the younger girls. Once each week they meet with the underclassmen and have discussions and programs to aid these younger girls in solving their problems. Once each month the Girl Counselors give an assembly for girls. They are in complete charge and succeed in carrying over their ideas.

The Washington Brothers act as big brothers to the younger boys. Their work is very similar to that of the Girl Counselors. They also hold monthly assemblies for the boys and frequent group meetings.

Mounting the west stairway, we approach the commercial department. The first stop is the second-hand bookstore, which sells second, third, and sometimes fourth hand books, without charge for the service. Student assistants aid Miss Boyd, the faculty sponsor, in this important work. Quitting this busy scene of activity, we next are attracted by the sound of many typewriters. The noise seems deafening, but the pupils and the teachers endure it. We pause in the room, unable to tear ourselves away from these intricate machines. We wonder how fingers can move so quickly. As we start out of the room, one of our party notices the mimeograph machine. The instructor runs off a few sheets to demonstrate the machine's use. We also visit the bookkeeping room with its high desks and business-like atmosphere. After watching the struggling bookkeepers for a while, we decide bookkeeping is not easy.

We walk down the hall and stop to glance into the geometry, economics, and English rooms. At the top of the center stairway stands the noble figure of George Washington, for whom our school was named. This statue was given by the Class of 1931. It stands there, an inspiration to Washingtonians. Passing down the hall, we delay a minute to study the school's miniature museum. The cases contain various historical and scientific objects. During spare moments, students gather before these display cases.

Coming to the science department, we first visit the biology room. Our eyes are immediately drawn to biological specimens which have been prepared by students as extra projects. Pickled rats, snakes, and frogs, canaries, fish, plants—all are of interest. We are then invited to view a movie in the general science laboratory. We greatly enjoy a film on soap making but secretly wish to see a "Mickey Mouse" comedy. In the next room, our interest is aroused by the attractive display of colorful posters, exhibiting correct posture, proper diet, personal hygiene and many other subjects pertaining to health.

We next enter the chemistry laboratory. It is quite different from the other classrooms. The rooms are equipped with steel rods which serve to support apparatus in certain difficult experiments. At first we thought we had come upon an egg factory where the eggs had deteriorated, for the odors that met us were overwhelming. The students here were preparing hydrogen sulphide and chlorine gases, which were to be used for experimental purposes. All day long such fumes predominate throughout the science wing of the building. We leave the chemistry room and pass into the stockroom of the science department. This room has many shelves of bottles, tubes and packages all of which appear very mysterious to us. We know that the room to our left is the physics room. We linger here a moment to listen to the recitation and view an experiment on sound. Several students are using tuning forks which produce notes similar to those we hear on the piano. We leave this interesting room to resume our tour.

Where do these stairs lead? The attic? This sounds interesting. A second later we scamper merrily up the stairs only to be stopped by a sense of overwhelming mysteriousness. The door is locked and all is dark. "Are you there, guide?", fearfully pleads one of our party. Finally the door is opened. We creep in warily, suddenly remembering weird stories—ghosts, mice. Someone attempts to explain that those things are unbelievable but——. We walk on, coming to the costume room. These costumes are owned by the school and are used for all school performances. We don a few, Robin Hood, George Washington, in fact, all the historical characters seem to have come to life. We amuse ourselves with the sound effects and gaze through the skylight. We move along into the blueprint room, where blue prints are developed. The room to the right is the old music and dancing room. Remember those rumbling sounds which made us think it was thundering every Friday when dancing classes were in session?

After descending the stairs, we pass into the tunnel. This connects the main building with the gymnasium and auditorium. The tunnel happens to be cold, dark, and slippery. What's that? Someone has fallen. Brr-rr, it is cold. Well, it is fortunate the clinic is near for we can step in and get first aid. As usual there are students waiting to be examined. Our eyes wander around the office. We eye the scale, weigh ourselves, test our temperature and pulse. Convinced that we are not ill, we proceed, but stop to look out of the window. We see the high smoke stack, the roofs of the auto shop and the annex. What's that peculiar building in the center court, the one with the triangular shaped roof? Why, that's the building through which all the fresh air passes before entering the engine room. We were in there; that's the place where the air is so cold and drafts of wind are in continuous motion.

We open the door oposite the clinic and find ourselves in the balcony of the girls' spacious swimming pool. The water appears so cool and clean. Some of the girls are apt swimmers, while others are just beginners. The room is large, containing a pool of 75,000 gallons of water, showers, and a large dressing space. We wish we could all take a dip but we must hurry on. We will not visit the boy's pool as it is identical with the girls'.

Climbing a short stairway, we are greeted by a tremendous amount of noise, which proves to be only the onlookers rooting their team to glory and victory. The Gymnasium building was constructed in 1925, and since has proved to be well worth the expense. Weekly games, contests, dances, concerts: in fact, all social affairs are held here. The gymnasium can seat several thousand spectators. The balcony leads to several small windows which give us a bird's-eye view of the football, hockey, and tennis fields. We can see the boys' band drilling for tonight's game. Look at those ranks! What gigantic floodlights! Our school claims to be the first school in northern Indiana to have night football games. We also notice the fountain, a gift of the class of 1932.

Leaving the balcony, stopping now and then to admire some display of muscular activities, we eventually find ourselves downstairs. We view the ticket office, the various doors leading to the boys' dressing rooms, janitor quarters, and still another door which is an entrance to the auditorium. We decide to enter through the main entrance, so we take a roundabout way. Entering the foyer, we decide to find where the left stairs lead. We know the upper ones lead to the balcony, but what about the lower? Descending the stairs, we are soon engulfed in a sea of darkness. Weird sounds seem to be coming forth. Everyone stands trembling. "Oh! what's that?" Someone turns on the light. What a difference. Why, it is a checkroom! Can you imagine it! What endless rows of racks and hooks. We enter the auditorium again. It seats several hundred people and has a stage which has been the scene of many a dramatic production. Recently the auditorium has been equipped with a loud speaker and a movie tone system. Back stage, the stage crew is busily designing scenery for a forthcoming performance. We go up a flight of stairs and find ourselves in the stage flies. The scene reminds us of many a motion picture back stage play. Leaning over, we manage to see the stage very clearly.

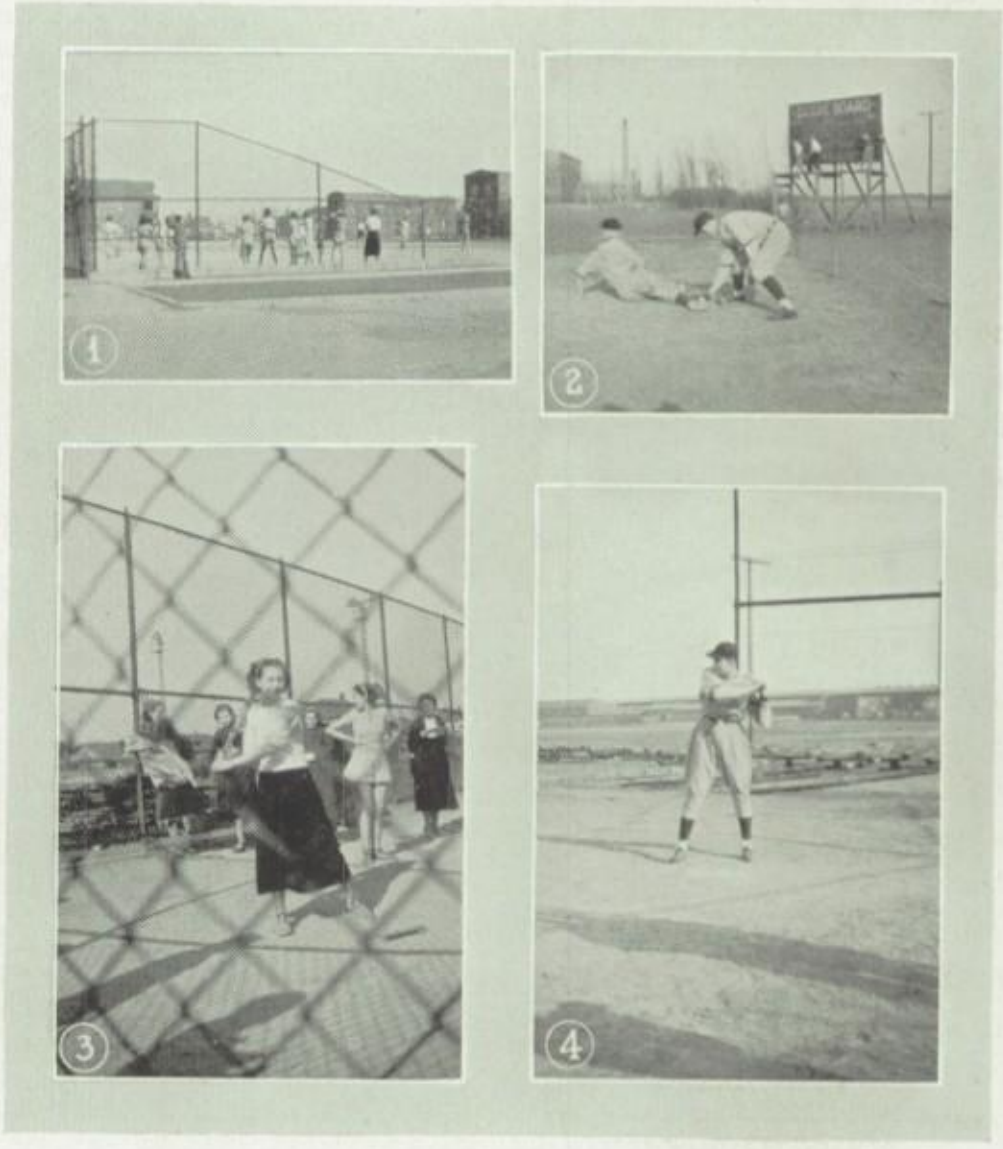
Regretfully, we leave this enchanting place and pass up more stairs to a small room in the attic of the gym. Guess what it is? It is the football storeroom. We find several of our prominent players lazily lounging against the equipment. We learn that the boys are only homesick for the touch and feel of their beloved articles. Poor boys, they've played their last game for their alma mater.

Leaving the gymnasium building, we walk around to the industrial building. We enter the auto shop amidst the rumbling of machinery. We see boys in ample overalls, soiled with grease, bent over motors or stretched prone underneath the cars. We vainly attempt to crawl under, but the odor of banana oil and grease is too much for our sense of smell. Wonder how the boys can put the cars together after taking them apart so thoroughly. Well, it must be genius in the making. We were interested to learn that this shop was not originally planned, but "just grew". Now it is self-supporting, receiving its income from repairing cars. In fact, it even yields a small profit. The mechanics have repaired many cars, and are constructing an airplane, ice sled, and motor boat.

1. "Baseballettes". 2. Safe?? 3. Here's how. 4. A homer??



The machine shop is the scene of hurried activity. Here also boys are busily engaged in work. We attempt to distract their attention, but succeed only momentarily, since the office managers keep a watchful, stern eye on us. Deciding that we've seen all, we come into the woodshop. What lovely tables and racks of woodwork! How we do envy these boys' mothers and girl friends when they receive these gifts. No time for monkey business, these boys mean business with a capital B. Both the machine shop and woodshop have won many prizes for their entries in the Purdue Roundup which is held every year at the university.

We stroll across the short campus and inhale the invigorating air. We climb a few short stairs which lead to the annex. Opening a door, we find ourselves in a long narrow hallway. To the left, a door stands ajar. We walk in—wonder what all those presses are—that queer looking machine. We learn that this is the Washington print shop, and that the machines are used in the setting of type. We lend a hand in setting the type, wait patiently until the Weekly Anvil is off the press, and read the news while it is still damp. Now we can spring the jokes on the others before they get a chance to read them. We receive a few souvenirs, dance, orchestra, and band programs, on our way out.

Across the hall we see the electric shop. We try a few door bells made by students and enjoy ourselves while telegraphing messages to each other. We decide to investigate the parts of a dry battery—Ouch! That was a shock! Untangling our feet from the wires, we proceed down the hall.

1. Practicing . 2. What a band!! 3. Lofty ambitions. 4. Practice makes perfect, or does it.

Hearing the strains of a beautiful Viennese waltz, we pause in the rehearsal rooms to listen to the concert orchestra's sweet melodies. Throughout the day, bands and orchestras rehearse here. They are important activities of the school and provide enjoyment for the public in their presentation of concerts. Some of the members of these organizations take part in the In-and-About Chicago Orchestra. To the strains of overtures and marches, the student body is spurred on to greater achievement.

Leaving the annex, we cross the court to the engine building. First we walk down a circular staircase, which reminds us of the murder mystery by that name, and arrive before five big steam furnaces. The chief engineer obligingly shows us around. Through dark, cold, and spooky tunnels and air shafts, we wind our way. Sometimes we crawl and sometimes we stoop, trying to understand the various scientific terms our guide is using to explain the apparatus. We examine the air heater, the humidifier, and the ventilator. Strange as it may seem, we are underneath the main building. Walking on, the engineer leading, we find ourselves beneath the swimming pools. We examine the swimming register. We learn some astonishing facts: pool water is changed but once a year, but this same water is purified by ultra-violet rays and is constantly mingling with a continuous flow of water. Here are the large vats where the towels and suits used by the swimming classes are washed and dried.

We move along, climb some dark stairs, open a door, pass through the court, enter the main building. Where are we? Right where we started from, on the first floor, Our tour is finished, our work completed, and we hope that we have succeeded in bringing the life of the student body closer to the eyes and hearts of the community.

Stanley:

I think I know you well enough that I could write a whole book about you. You're the most decent person that I have ever known just keep on being good and you'll get up in the world some day.

I never, never forget the good times we had together and especially that one Saturday till Sunday when we came home with the milkman. There is also one other time that I'll never forget, the time you took me to the grand march. I hope that in the future we always have good times together. Don't forget I want a ride on the boat some day.

I also will remember this year as the year when mother went to the hospital and the ——— I had while she was there.

The mission is another thing to remember and the good preachings we had. Maybe some day I'll tell you about them. Would you like to know??

There is one thing which I was very dissappointed about but some day you may find out.

"The Days That Will Never Come Again"

Long after your school days are past you will keep and treasure this book. It will be a perennial reminder of the springtime of your life, but when you turn to the printed words and to the pictures set down here they will beckon back the yesterdays, perhaps with a flood of memories you little dream of now. When life is new we little heed the present. It is only when the years wear on and time's magic mists soften the light of other days that we shall fully realize the happiness of these fleeting, golden minutes.

Regards to a wonderful man
